FFICE OF THE DIRECTOR

Honorable Olin D. Johnston United States Senate Washington 25, D. C.

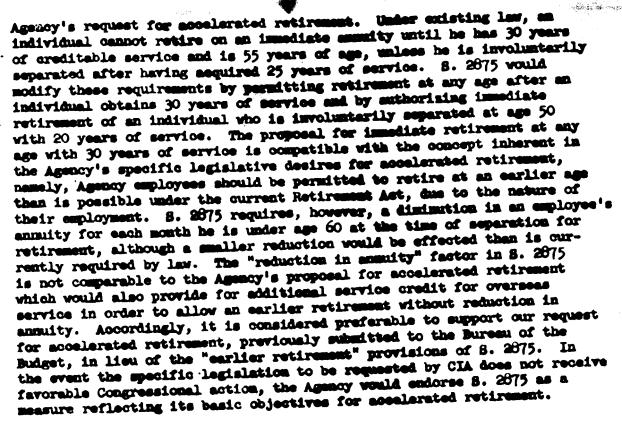

Dear Senator Johnston:

In accordance with your request, this agency has reviewed and comments as follows on S. 2875, with specific reference to the draft bill of the Civil Service Commission which would also revise the Retirement Act, as amended.

When this Agency reviewed the Commission's bill, which generally incorporates the Kaplan Committee proposals, we took a position favoring the proposal since it would substantially liberalise existing provisions of the Retirement Act. Prior to arriving at this consission, however, we evaluated the proposed bill in order to determine (1) its security implications; (2) whether or not the bill contains a provision for accelerated retirement, comparable to or having a bearing on the Agency's views on desirable retirement legislation authorizing accelerated retirement; and (3) the degree to which the Commission's draft covers the problem of retirement benefits for alien personnel. Our analysis of the draft bill sponsored by the Civil Service Commission disclosed that the combination of Social Security and Civil Service retirement would create a severe security problem imagemen as existing precedures in the administration of Bocial Security would entail the external disclosure of the names of all employees subject to Social Security. Moreover, the Commission bill is silent on the issue of accelerated retirement, and in recognition of this fact the Agency continues to advocate consideration of a special request for legislation which would grant such authority to the Agency. In addition, the Commission's proposed bill does not contain a provision for retirement coverage of aliens, although the proposed Foreign Employees Personnel Act would suthorize participation by Federal agencies in the Social Security plan of foreign governments.

Mindful of the previous position taken by the Agency on the Commission's draft bill, 8. 2875 has been reviewed with the same four factors in mind, namely, accelerated retirement, increased benefits, retirement coverage of aliens and security considerations. Our specific equations on each of these points are as follows:

(1) 8. 2875, as the Commission's draft bill, does not contain per se any accelerated retirement feature which is comparable to the Agency's view presented to the Bureau of the Budget. Unlike the Commission's draft, however, 8. 2875 does contain certain features which facilitate retirement at an earlier age, which is a principal objective of the

- (2) The subject bill would significently liberalize existing retirement benefits relative to those surrently suthorised by law. In addition to the aforementioned provisions applicable to retirement at an earlier age, there are various other features which would materially benefit Agency personnel. The following are considered noteworthy:
 - (a) The provisions for reemployment of annuitants would be liberalised. S. 2875 would permit the reemployment of retirees by Federal agencies for any period determined by the appointing officer.
 - (b) The formula for computing annuity benefits would be liberalized and a minimum disability annuity would also be guaranteed.
 - (c) The factors for reduction in annuity of an employee retiring under age 60 would be changed from t of 1% for each full month the employee is under age 60 to a scale of reductions which would be appreciably less, e.g., an employee retiring at age 55 would be subject to a reduction of 6.25%, rather than 15% as currently required. The proposed reduction would decrease the problem which the Agency seeks to eliminate in its request for accelerated retirement, i.e., retirement at an earlier age without reduction in amounty.

- (d) Existing survivor benefits would be augmented, and the present eligibility for such benefits would be expended considerably by 8. 2875. Under the proposed bill, the vidow or vidower of any retired employee would receive 50% of the retiree's annuity up to $4,000, and it would begin woon the employee's death. This may be contrasted to the current situation, memaly, that a retired employee must elect a reduced annuity in order to provide a benefit for the surviving spouse. The only exception to this existing rule is a provision which permits a widow to receive a benefit until age 50 if a child under age 18 also survives and the retiree was receiving a disability ansmity or he retired on an immediate ansmity after separation with at least 15 years of creditable service. In addition, retirees could elect under 8. 2875 a survivor benefit for a vidow or vidower equal to 50% of all amounty in excess of $4,000 by taking a reduction of 10% in all annuity exceeding $4,000. The proposal would also provide for an immediate annuity to a widow or dependent vidower if an employee dies in the Federal service after 5 years of creditable service, regardless of the age of the spouse at the time of the employee's death. Currently, such a benefit may not be extended to vidovers of deceased employees, and the widow's benefit cannot be paid until age 50 unless a dependent child also survives the employee. Lastly, the formula for computing children benefits would be liberalised and would permit, for the first time, such payments when a dependent widower survives the employee or annuitent.
- (e) There would be a potential increase in the coverage of Federal personnel under the Retirement Act, i.e., contract employees and aliens.
- (3) 8. 2875 contains certain liberalizing provisions which are similar to or are variations of sections in the Civil Service Commission's proposed bill. It also contains several features which appear to be more liberal than the Commission's proposed bill, e.g., provision of a deferred annuity with 5 years' service rather than 10 years; and retirement at an earlier age. This Agency therefore supports both measures insofar as they seek to further the retirement benefits available to Federal employees and their survivors.
- (4) 8. 2875 would appear to meet in part the objective of this Agency to provide some retirement coverage for alien personnel. As in the case of the Commission's draft bill, 8. 2875 would authorize the Commission to exclude from the Retirement Act employees whose tenure is temporary or intermittent. In contrast to the Commission's proposed bill, however, no employee would be employed from retirement coverage, by the terms of S. 2875, after he acquired six months' continuous service. It should also be noted that this provision would have the same effect on employees hired by commiss instead of through regular appointment. S. 2875 would not apply, though, to independent contrastors.

(5) Enactment of S. 2075 in lieu of the Counteries's draft bill would evert the security problems posed for this Agency by the latter bill, which contemplates the general coverage of Pederal employees by Social Security. Although the Agency has relatively for individuals currently subject to Social Security, the general coverage of Agency employees under this program would involve enternal reporting on most of its personnel. Since S. 2075 does not contemplate the combination of the Bocial Security and Civil Service indirects programs, it would not precipitate the security difficulties inherent in the Commission's draft bill. Moreover, the provision for coverage of temperary or intermittent personnel who serve continuously for a period of six months would have the effect of extending Civil Service retirement to certain Agency employees hired by contract who are convently subject to Social Security.

Sincerely,

Alles V. Dulles Director
